INTRODUCTION

Genealogy is the practice of inquiry into family descent. Family history is a way to connect with your ancestors that is becoming increasingly popular with people of all ages around the world. At Yukon Archives we find many of our research requests come from Yukon First Nations descendants, Yukoners new and old, and visitors whose ancestors passed through or lived here during the various eras of the Territory's history.

Once you have drawn on the memories and documents available in your immediate family, the Yukon Archives is a great place to continue your search. Our extensive collections contain many different types of information to help you learn about family members and how they lived. These records don't always yield all the information you might hope for, but the search process itself is often interesting and gives insight into the lifestyle of the hardy and ingenious Yukoners.

STARTING YOUR SEARCH

Establish as much as possible about your ancestor's life beforehand. This will make your search easier, and it is more likely that you will find information. Talk to grandparents, parents, aunts and uncles to find out what they know about the person you are researching. You may also find information in family Bibles, letters, photographs or diaries.

Determine how he or she traveled and date of arrival in Yukon, if mining claims were registered or property acquired, and if he or she was married or died here. Documentation of these events can often be located in the resource material available at Yukon Archives.

Record the person's full name; including alternate spellings or nicknames. Where was the ancestor born, where did he or she live? Did your ancestor have children, and if so what were their names? If he or she left the Yukon, when and how did they leave? Pool your resources with other family members doing genealogical research; share information and gather together all the details that you find. Make notes on what you learn and where you look.

Bring notes on the information you discover and provide a list of sources you used when you visit or contact the Archives. Yukon Archives staff will do their best to help you find the information you are seeking, but not all searches are successful.

VISITING THE ARCHIVES

Yukon Archives, open Tuesday through Saturday year-round, is located at Yukon Place, 400 College Drive, adjacent to Yukon College and the Yukon Arts Centre. Travel north on Range Road and head up the hill at the Yukon Place sign, or take the Takhini/College City bus. Our many varied collections contain photographs, letters, diaries, corporate and government records, films, maps, sound recordings, newspapers, pamphlets, books, and periodicals.

If you visit the Yukon Archives in person, we will be happy to assist you with your search. If you are unable to visit Whitehorse, our reference staff can provide help by mail, fax, telephone, or e-mail.

The more information you provide about your ancestor, the more we are likely to help you find.

GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH AT YUKON ARCHIVES

Some of the family history research at Yukon Archives falls into one of several categories. These examples show the kinds of records you might use to follow your course of inquiry.

➤ Gold Rush stampeders

Early mining records can provide proof that your ancestor was in the Yukon Stampede-era directories and gazetteers are also very helpful
Search using the Pan for Gold Database (yukongenealogy.com). You might find the mining claim number there, saving a step at the Archives.

➤ First Nations descendants

Come prepared with ancestor's full name, native language name, and community of birth.
The Index to the Journals of Rev. Robert McDonald 1862-1913 records early First Nations and other family names in northern Yukon and NWT
Bonnar Cooley's Tlingit-Haida family tree shows lineages for indigenous people of the southern Yukon
Anglican Church Corporate Records and DIAND records

➤ Alaska Highway holdings at Yukon Archives

Published material, photo collections, government records, and maps, with a few manuscripts and corporate records available.
RCAF and business records from the 1940s-1950s

(N.B: Our Alaska Highway holdings do not include business records from the various private construction companies that worked on the highway.)

FAMILY HISTORY INFORMATION SOURCES

Genealogical Cart

In response to the many queries about Gold Rush stampeders, the Genealogical Cart carries mining ledgers, indexes of free miner's certificates, and lists compiled by the Dawson postmaster dating from 1875-1953. These records, some only available at Yukon Archives, may help you verify if your ancestor staked claims in the Yukon and where, or about his/her movements around the North.

Other resources are located in the reference room including indexed books about the Klondike Stampede, directories, and gazetteers.

Public Access Catalogue (PAC)

website address: www.yukia.ca

The PAC is available at every Yukon community library. It lists all published materials, like books and pamphlets, held in the libraries and at Yukon Archives. The keyword searchable on-line catalogue lists materials by subject, author, and title. Items located at the Archives will be cited as either Archives Library or Archives Coumts. Please note author, title, and call number if you plan to have these items retrieved during your visit to the Archives, or to save time if you contract a researcher to do the digging for you.

Archival Collections Records Database

Yukon Archival Union List <http://www.whitehorse.microage.ca/yca/sections/yaul/yaul.html>

Information about many of the collections in the Yukon Archives holdings is searchable on our description database, which is being replaced in 2003. (It will be searchable on the Yukon Archives website in 2004.) Our staff will assist you should you require help with your search. YAUL contains fonds and collection level descriptions of archival material from Yukon Archives and other institutions.

Finding Aids

For archival materials like photographs, government records, and manuscripts refer to this bibliography, the descriptions database, or to Yukon Archives finding aids. Finding aids, compiled for specific collections or subjects, assist researchers with detailed collection descriptions and lists of materials relevant to particular topics like First Nations History or the Alaska Highway. These helpful booklets are accessible in the reference room. Many finding aids are now available in PDF format on our website at www.btc.gov.yk.ca. Click on "Finding Aids" for a list of available inventories.

Search Files

The search files found in the Reference Room contain newspaper clippings and other information on well known Yukoners, places, and events in Yukon history.

RESEARCH MATERIALS FOUND AT THE ARCHIVES

“Genealogical Research at the Yukon Archives” is a bibliography designed to assist with family history investigation. It describes the material in the Yukon Archives holdings, what information these different records carry and how to access them. It is arranged by Type of Record.

➤ Published Sources

Pamphlets and books with Yukon content, newspapers dating from the Klondike Gold Rush to the present, periodicals, indexes, and directories are all published sources.

➤ Corporate Records

Yukon organizations such as businesses, societies, clubs and associations, Yukon First Nations and churches generate Corporate Records. Yukon Archives holds many records from the Anglican Church Diocese of Yukon, and other Yukon churches. These documents can be very helpful in the pursuit of family history, because they include vital statistics and additional information that may be useful for your genealogical search. However, access is often restricted and Yukon Archives staff will review the information pertinent to your research. Permission from the Diocese is required for photocopying. (See Diocese contact info on page III-1.) All restrictions on records are noted in this Bibliography.

➤ Government Records

These include some records created by the three levels of government: federal, territorial and municipal. They may contain information on estates, marriage licenses, school records, and other records that can assist in your search.

➤ Manuscripts (Private Records)

The Archives manuscript collections include diaries, letters, private papers, and other items from people who lived in the Yukon or were somehow associated with the area. These offer fascinating snapshots of the lives of those who created them, but their value to family history is limited to those who are directly related.

➤ Audiovisual

This section includes photographs, slides, postcards, stereocards, and negatives; as well as moving images and sound recordings. The videos may be commercial productions or video copies of historical films made by amateurs or professionals.

Our audio collections contain oral history interviews, broadcast items, and music. Recorded interviews with First Nations elders and long-time Yukoners are a source for names and stories that might relate to your research. Whether or not you find mention of your relative, you can learn valuable information about how people lived and worked in the past.

HOW TO READ THE BIBLIOGRAPHICAL CITATIONS

Record Format

Each citation will normally follow a standard format:

Author/collection name
 File or publication title
 Record type and Location and/or Accession number
 Outside date
 Restriction

When you request an archival item, write down the accession number, call number, collection name, and location on the retrieval slip. If you have any questions please ask the reference staff for assistance.

Record Types/Codes (NB: "f" means "file.")

Call #	Books
COR	Corporate Records
GOV	Government records
MAP	Maps
MF	Microfilm
Microfiche	Microfiche
MRG	Municipal Record Group
MSS	Manuscripts
O/S	Oversize
PAM	Pamphlets
PHO	Photographs
Ref #	Reference books are kept in reference room, no retrieval slip will be needed
RG	Record Group
SR	Sound Recordings

Some archival materials are restricted and you will need permission to look at them. Examples of restricted material include baptismal, marriage, and burial registers in the Anglican Church Collection; estate and other files containing personal information in the Yukon Government Records; and hospital files in the Corporate Records collections.

Yukon Archives reference staff will review the material and provide the non-restricted portions of the information for you. Archives staff may be able to release additional restricted information to you if you are close relative. You may be asked to verify your connection with the ancestor. All government records are subject to review under the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act.

NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS

Newspapers are available on microfilm and in hard copy for various Yukon and Alaskan communities, spanning the years 1898 to present. These contain many references to individuals including reports of community activities, birth, death, and marriage notices, coming and goings, advertisements, and obituaries.

Periodicals often feature articles about important Yukoners. Indexes available for newspapers and magazines to assist you in locating articles of interest.

CHURCH RECORDS

VITAL STATISTICS

ANGLICAN CHURCH

The missionary work of the Anglican Church in Yukon began in July 1861, years before the influx of white settlers. For many years it was one of few agencies ministering to the needs of people in remote communities. The Anglican Church records are a source of valuable and unique genealogical information from school files, vital statistics (births, deaths, marriages, and confirmations), medical records, and census data.

These records are primarily arranged by parish, some of which cover large geographical areas. The best way to locate your information is to look in the index to find the Parish records that have information your ancestor's specific community. Some records for other churches are also available.

These records are the property of the Anglican Church. Due to the personal and confidential nature of vital statistics and other information contained in many church records, access to most of them requires written permission from the Diocese of Yukon Synod Office. Contact Diocese of Yukon, Box 31136, Whitehorse, Yukon Y1A 5P7, phone 867-667-7746, fax 867-667-6125, email dioyuk@internorth.com. You may be asked to establish your relationship to the person you are researching.

GOVERNMENT RECORDS

Many federal records that are rich in genealogical potential, such as census, election, school and police records, are available on microfilm at Yukon Archives. Records of the Mining Recorders are the original ledger books, applications and other documents.

The Yukon Central Registry files (Series 1-9) contain many records useful for genealogical research, including estate files, land records, voters lists, professional registers and a few vital statistics records. An index is available for the Central Registry records, and a PDF finding aid is mounted on the Yukon Archives website.

Other series available from post-1950s Yukon Territorial Government include school registers, estate files, and coroner records.

Municipal records include voters lists, cemetery records and tax and assessment rolls.

Yukon Government records are subject to review under the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act. If you know the file(s) you would like to see before you visit the Archives, please advise us in advance so the material may be reviewed before your arrival. While we try to make the review of records a priority, researchers may experience delays in viewing Yukon government records.

Municipal government records include voter lists, cemetery records and tax and assessment rolls.
